Furthermore, the Candidates collaborate with their instructor, classmates, peers, families, and administrators when writing the LA-CEC Mini-Grant. The LA-CEC Grant Committee fund twelve (12) grants per year. Candidates at NSU have received, at least, 11 of the 12 grants awarded each year due to this assessment.

The course EDSP 5030 Classroom and Behavior Management of all Students is designed to teach Candidates applied behavior analysis, principles and applications of behavioral assessment and modification techniques, and how to create positive behavioral supports in their classrooms and is used to assess SLO 5. Candidates are required to complete 30 hours of field based experiences in completing a Functional Behavioral Assessment (FBA) on one student with a challenging behavior. The key assessment in this course is The Functional Behavioral Assessment is a collaborative, ethical, legal, and time-intensive document. Because the Special Education faculty consider it to be a document for 100% mastery, Candidates are required to achieve mastery on the FBA. Additionally, this assignment provides Candidates with the knowledge and skills that all special educators should have when dealing with challenging behaviors. The Functional Behavioral Assessment is completed when the Candidates are teaching in their own classrooms. Discipline and behavior issues are of crucial importance to candidates, families, administrators, and students. Therefore, this assessment was designed to create a proactive, comprehensive approach to addressing children who have challenging behaviors in elementary, middle school, or high school classrooms. The goal of achieving 100% Target or Mastery was an ethical and professional decision made by the NSU faculty to ensure Candidates understood the FBA process, and they could apply their FBA knowledge and skills by implementing in their own classrooms.

Finding: All Candidates achieved Mastery on successfully completing a Functional Behavioral Assessment.

Analysis: Candidates learned applied behavior analysis principles and how to apply those principles.

Action - Decision or Recommendation: Faculty are satisfied with the results of this key assessment.

Assessment Cycle

Academic Year 2016-2017

Council for Exceptional Children (CEC) requires mastery in most areas, so supports have been put into place that allow students to submit, review, and resubmit until mastery level is achieved. As a result, the key assessments chosen for each program will remain the same. New disposition forms have allowed program coordinators to identify areas of teaching that may need additional supports or instruction. Both University Supervisors and faculty are able to work together in supporting interns in the MAT programs.
