NSU's trained confidential advisors serve as a secure pathway for reporting misconduct related to gender discrimination, sexual assault or harassment, interpersonal violence, stalking, sexual coercion, and electronic harassment. Confidential advisors assist reporters with understanding personal rights, possible University accommodations, further reporting options, potential investigation and adjudication processes, and possible sanctions. Reports to confidential advisors or requests for accommodations, such as no contact orders, class, transportation, or housing changes, and University appeals process, will not trigger an investigation by the institution. Confidential advisors are accepting, inclusive, and educated concerning reporters' gender identity or expression, sexuality, race, ethnicity, or ability. If you have questions about confidential advisors or reporting, please contact smithal@nsula.edu, or call 318-357-5570.
